

The News Journal

www.delawareonline.com

FRIDAY April 7, 2006

50c
• FINAL EDITION

Stern regulars provide insults at Big Kahuna

The Rev. Bob Levy, a regular on Howard Stern's show, lives in the basement of his home outside Philadelphia, with his ex-wife and son living upstairs. Their unique situation provides ample material for the show.

Rev. Bob Levy

At 8 p.m. Saturday, Levy, Sal "The Stockbroker" Governale and Shuli, whose names and voices will sound familiar to listeners of Stern's program on Sirius Satellite Radio, visit The Big Kahuna, 500 S. Madison St., Wilmington, as "The Killers of Comedy."

Governale, a former stockbroker whose dream to work in comedy Stern helped realize, makes prank phone calls and records bits for the show.

Shuli reports for "Howard 100 News," which offers a humorous account of Stern-related news.

Tickets are $20 and are available by calling 571-8402.

Christopher Yasiejko